

Who is the top dog of winter Olympics?

Banner

To get to the bottom of this I’ve decided on a concrete method to determine exactly which nation reigns supreme. To eliminate the possibility of a country winning by having a huge number of athletes only the medals will be counted on a point system. Every medal an athlete earns for their country adds to the country’s score. A bronze medal is 1 point, a silver medal is 2 points, and a gold medal is 3 points.

Bronze

Bar graph showing the top 5 countries by how many bronze medals they won

Total checkpoint

Bar graph showing top 5 countries by total points

Silver

Bar graph showing the top 5 countries by how many silver medals they won

Total checkpoint

Bar graph showing top 5 countries by total points

Gold

Bar graph showing the top 5 countries by how many gold medals they won

Total checkpoint

Bar graph showing top 5 countries by total points

According to the data Canada is clearly the front runner with a grand total of 625 medals, and 1458 points.